FUMA Product Specifications

Twin-Tower-Design

The Fuma Rev. B CPU Cooler is made of two towers connected via six heatpipes to the baseplate. The twin-tower structure prevents mutual heating of the heatpipes while enhancing heat dissipation to the fins. Combined with further improvements, cooling performance increases, whereas compact dimensions are maintained. The Fuma Rev. B is predestined for ultra-quiet cooling but is an ideal overclocking cooler as well - at a very reasonable price.

Flexible Fan Mounting

The heatsink is designed for the use of up to three fans*. If two fans are used, flexible fan positioning is possible. This way, Fuma Rev. B adopts perfectly to the case airflow. Furthermore, flexible fan mounting increases compatibility - conflicts with memory modules can be avoided. Included with Fuma Rev. B are two Slip Stream fans, a series valued by its' customers for many years. It is characterized by its' small fan hub enhancing the air flow. The PWM-range, adjusted to meet the coolers' requirements, offers the best possible combination of noise level, cooling efficiency and

H.P.M.S. II (Hyper Precision Mounting System II)

The updated Hyper Precision Mounting System II now features full compatibility to current sockets including AMD's AM4 and Intel's LGA 2066 platforms. A convenient mounting bar simplifies the installation process, while spring-loaded screws prevent uneven pressure distribution.
